

Nov 31 Dec 73
to Mark West.

Could call it Parmenides principle [What is..... is identical with the thought that recognizes it" (Encyc. Brit.) or "No one to think, no one to know? Then no words"! (my words)] or Berkeley principle [Geo. Berkeley, "No object exists apart from mind" (Encyc. Brit.)] but would prefer a more descriptive name.
 One problem - too many overtones we don't want in terms like "gnostic", "knowledge".
 What about a legend as source, sleeping princess who has to be spoken to to come to life, etc. But could think of a compound word

Knowledge 490 Existence 1, 3, 118, 151, 186 cognizance being — see Ency. B. cognition science of existence, ontology: [introduced by apprehension occur [the German philosopher Christian perception come into existence] Wolff in the 18th century. acroamatics arise [theory of being: what really exists (meaning?) world 318] in contrast with what only knowing plenam seems to exist, of what perma-consciousness substantiality nently exists in contrast

Best up to this point: the no-knower -no-world principle. Do not have time to search mythology at this point.	tangible	with what only temporarily things	exists, and of what exists inhabit	independently and un-creation	conditionally in contrast nature	with what exists dependently world	and conditionally. [Article cosmos	says, cf. metaphysics] ^{same} "G.R." author no good	